

NEC vs JCT - Panel Debate

Wednesday 27 January 5.30pm

Join us for a seminar on JCT vs NEC our highly experienced construction law specialist speakers. Anthony Philpott, a Barrister at 12 Old Square Chambers in London will answer questions from the JCT perspective and Kai von Pahlen, a solicitor at Veale Wasborough Vizards will respond in respect of NEC. The question master for the seminar will be conducted by CIOB Bristol Hub Chairman Trevor Drury, also a practising Barrister and construction professional.

The UK Construction Industry predominantly uses two suites of contract, the JCT and NEC. However, they are very different in their drafting and the requirements of both the Contract Administrator/ Project Manager and the Contractor. Using a JCT approach to an NEC contract will result in serious consequences for the parties and vice versa, and possibly lead to disputes ultimately being referred to a formal dispute resolution tribunal i.e. adjudication, litigation or arbitration.

This seminar will pose the same questions or frequent issues that construction projects experience to our highly experienced construction law specialist speakers.

Those attending will come away with an understanding of what they are required to do under each style of contract for the same issue.
