APIL accreditation provides a consumer quality mark demonstrating the specialist expertise of solicitors, legal executives, barristers and paralegals in progressing personal injury claims.

Based on a competence framework, the standards of occupational competence are used as a benchmark of knowledge, skills, understanding and know-how, and focus on work-based learning. There are varying levels: portal claims handler, litigator, senior litigator, fellow, senior fellow, along with specialist accreditations for particular areas of personal injury, like military and spinal cord injury claims.

As an accredited member, you will receive referrals from members of the public and become linked to a major national public information campaign, promoting specialist expertise through use of the accredited logos and listings at apil.org.uk.
